CANTON AREA HERITAGE CENTER

Founded by Isaac Swan in 1825, Canton has a long and fascinating history. It is populated with inventors and adventurers as diverse as Charles Duryea, who actually developed the first practical automobile. Astronaut Colonel Steve Nagle, the 100th American in space, is from Canton, as is Bill Cook, founder of Cook Group, Inc., the largest privately-held medical device manufacturer in the world. Perhaps fitting, since Canton is surrounded by rich and bountiful farmland, the town is best known for the genius of William Parlin, and his business partner, William Orendorff, who created the P&O Plowworks, which later became International Harvester – Canton Works. The Heritage Center features artifacts and documents related to these inventors and adventurers, as well as exhibits related to other important historical information on Canton and Fulton County.
